Posillico Corporate Office Relocates to 1750 New Highway Farmingdale, New York

January 12, 2009 – Farmingdale, NY – Posillico cut the ribbon on its new headquarters located at 1750 New Highway Farmingdale, New York. The conversion of this former industrial space into a single level work platform for Posillico provides nearly 20,000 square feet of office and training space. Posillico will be better positioned to integrate professional services for our clients with a layout that promotes collaboration and utilization of the best engineering science and safety practices.

Posillico decision to stay down the block from its original operational headquarters will enable us to make that facility more effective and continue to provide the benefit of economic growth in the Town of Babylon and the Route 110 corridor.

Posillico is well poised to face the new challenges of an aging suburbia by providing an integrated construction approach to solving regional transportation, environmental and development problems. All of Posillico's business units will benefit from the efficiencies and new state of the art construction the space has provided at its new headquarters.
